order, but also to the advantage of the world's commerce, for the resources of the islands will now be opened up and legitimate enterprise allowed free play. The form of government, we take it, will be modelled on that of the Indian and Malay States that enjoy British protection, autonomy being granted to the natives to the fullest extent that may be deemed possible. Some amendment of the United States constitution may be necessary to admit of the administration of colonies on these lines, but it will not be the first time that that historic instrument has undergone amendment. Whether any complications with other Powers will ensue remains to be seen, but if so the United States, having once declared her intentions, will see the matter through.
